The New Standard Time.

THE new standard time which took effect in railroad circles all over the United States at noon Sunday, is divided into four sections, viz: The Inter-colonial, Eastern, Western and Pacific, being four belts of fifteen degrees each, and the difference in each belt will be just one hour, so that it will be an easy matter to regulate clocks or watches in passing from one belt to the other. For instance, the Inter-colonial belt extends from Washington to Huntington, and the trains arriving there from Washington will be just one hour behind the train leaving there for this place, yet they will make close connection—the change of conductors merely making the change in time. This belt from Huntington extends to fifty miles West of St. Louis, where a jump of another hour in advance is made—that belt extending to the Rocky Mountains, and the next belt to San Francisco. The new system of marking the dials of our clocks and watches from 1 to 24 consecutively, thus 1 o'clock p. m., as at present, to be 13 o'clock, and so on, has been in use on some of the Western railroad time-tables for some years, and will probably be brought into general use by all of the railroads within a year.

A Pair of Necks to Stretch.

THE Court of Appeals on Saturday affirmed the decision of the Adair County Circuit Court, which passed the death sentence on two brothers named Fitzpatrick, for murdering an old man named Brewster, in a very brutish and cowardly manner, at Neatsville, on August election day. Brewster, who was quite an old man with long hair, was leading his little boy by the hand, was approached and struck by Fitzpatrick, who accused him of having talked about him. Brewster said that he had not, but if he had he would take it all back, that he wanted no trouble. At this he was then held by the hair and cut in the back with a knife, while another brother ran up and shot him through the head. The old man fell to the ground and was again shot by the other brother, and died in a circle of fifteen or twenty cowardly scoundrels who formed a circle and looked on at the villainous murder without trying to stay the proceedings.

Dion Boucicault the greatest living dramatist with his own company and seventeen changes of scenery commenced a week's engagement at Robinson's Opera, Cincinnati, last night. They can be used as sleepers, dining and parlor cars, and are models of perfect elegance.

THE troubles of a Texas editor are in no wise like angels' visits, as the following clipping goes to show:

Sickness at home has left us little peace of mind. Our foreman has been sick all the week, and we had to get up out of our bed to prevent a total failure in issuing. Wednesday came, and our junior assistant, Mr. Sidney Smith, rose to the exigence of the case and worked the press, although it is too much for his strength and size. Our paper is like a picked-up dinner.

Thanksgiving Pudding.

Two quarts rich, tart apples, chopped as for mince pie; one cup of sugar, swelled with two cups boiling water; one cup of sugar, and one and a half cups desiccated coconut; mix intimately and bake one hour in an earthen pudding dish. Serve cold. This is a pudding worthy to grace any occasion when a pudding can be served, and containing no butter or fat, it is not difficult of digestion.

A MT. STERLING special says: "During the last term of the Powell Circuit Court, a decision was rendered in a land suit between Ludfords and Hatton, in which certain lines were identified. Hatton, in compliance with the judgment of the Court, began moving the fence, when it was thrown down by the Ludfords. This was repeated by the contending parties until threats of violence were made. Last week the two brothers, Ludfords, armed with double-barreled shot-guns, went out to the scene determined to carry into effect their former threats, or have the lives where they wanted them, notwithstanding the opinion of the Court to the contrary. They found Hatton at work. When their guns were made to cover him, the order was given to throw up his hands, but instead of obeying he gathered his faithful rifle. The two brothers fired, but without effect. The rifle was then fired, and a ball took effect in the hip of one of the Ludfords, causing an ugly, but not serious wound. With this the parties went to their homes their blood at fighting heat. This occurrence was on the line between Powell and Menifee, and on the waters of Red River, the Ludfords living in Powell and the Hattons in Menifee. The families of the respective parties are now aroused, and swear vengeance. Fears are entertained that one county will be in arms against the other and much blood be shed. Weekly Review of the Louisville Leaf Tobacco Market.

The receipts for the week were 140 hds, against 270 hds last week and 310 in the corresponding week of last year. The market has been quiet and entirely devoid of interest. Receipts have been the smallest of the season, offerings have been very light, and the state of supplies has not been sufficient to sustain much interest on the part of buyers. There are no changes in prices to note, either in Burley tobacco or dark and heavy styles. Lugs continue relatively strong. It is reported that buyers are paying for new tobacco, of both the principal types, such prices as, in the opinion of local dealers, will result in losses in any of the large markets. This is, of course, a matter of opinion, and opinion is not always infallible. The stockholders of the Kentucky Tobacco Association have voted to put their business in liquidation, placing Mr. Winlock, the President in charge as trustee. Mr. S. Caye, the manager of the concern, will represent him in winding up its affairs, and with his brother, and Mr. Wheeler as country agent, has organized a new firm, which will immediately succeed the old association. A peculiarly nefarious job of nesting was brought to light during the week, and it is to be hoped that the parties concerned will consider it a duty to the trade at large to bring the offender to justice. We quote full-weight packages as follows:

Dose-Taking.

IT is to be feared that to most people medicine is not an erudite science or a learned art, but is little more than the commonplace administration of physic. They cannot understand medicine without drugs, and its virtue and power are popularly measured by the violence of its operations. Its very name is in ordinary parlance synonymous with physic. Take from it its pills and potions, and for them you take away its whole art and mystery. They do not believe in a scheme of treatment, however deep-laid and skillful, which does not include a statutory dosage. So that, as a rule, medical men are practically compelled to give their patients a visible object of faith in some form of physic, which may be at most designed to effect some very subordinate purpose. And it is remarkable how strongly even among the educated classes this feeling prevails. Cure by the administration of mixtures and boluses is so fixed and ancient a tradition that it is only very slowly that the world will give it up. The anxiety of the friends of the patient wants to do more than follow the simple direction of "nursing," which have been so carefully inculcated and possess apparently so little remedial power. There is nothing of the unknown about them in which a fluttering hope of great advantage can nestle. Thus it is necessary to educate the world into a belief in medicine apart from drugs, which finds its power of curing in adaptations of the common conditions of life and applications of physiological facts—a medicine which takes into its hands the whole life, and orders and fashions its every detail with scientific definiteness. It is found in every-day practice that this popular misunderstanding of the modern spirit of medicine constantly checks the little tentative advances of a more scientific treatment, and it is necessary that it should be generally understood how powerfully the various processes of the economy may be affected by the manipulation of the conditions of common life.

This more positive recognition of biological truths in therapeutics is the explanation of the seeming paradoxical position so frequently assumed in the best professional circles—that it is incorrect and unscientific to speak of the cure of disease. From a simple cold to a yellow fever, from a tiny scratch to a broken limb, medicine can do no more than to place the affected part in the best way of curing itself. Surely no finer tribute could be paid to the historic Father of medicine than this reversal of the twenty-second century of the doctrine and experience of this art to his oft-quoted principle. What he, the founder of dogmatic medicine, saw, is the fundamental axiom of experimental medicine. It removes hindrances, stimulates or inhibits erring processes, and waits upon the great work of healing by the natural energies. It is very desirable, both in the interests of medicine and of the patient, that this truer conception of the reparative processes of the system should generally obtain. It defines, at least negatively, the possibilities of medicine, and shows at any rate what cannot be expected from it. And it emphasizes the importance and urgency of the prophylactic and hygienic aspects of the science, assigning to it the paramount place in common life which is its due. The vulgar notion of a "cure," that the reparative processes of the body are at the command of the medicine, and that a good recovery leaves no trace whatever of injury in the parts affected, is a delusion. Even in the most perfect convalescence, in which no feeling or sign of a past illness can be discovered, either by the detective skill of the physician or by the stress upon the system of exacting work, there is, in reality, in altered tissue or the diminution of life power, some mark of the illness which is ineffaceable. In so slight an injury even as a skin-deep cut, the mark remains for life. And when a superficial abrasion has healed, the new skin is not "skin" at all, and has none of the properties of true skin; new skin no more really comes than does a new finger in place of a lost one. The transient "colds," which the Englishman comes to regard as an annual tribute to his native climate, leave each one a morbid something which entails a greater susceptibility to the catching of another. And so in greater degree is it in more serious disease. Even in the blood, so constantly changed and renewed, this rule holds still; and it is frequently observed by the older army surgeons that a great loss in the field, after the period of development of the body has passed, leaves the soldier more or less blanched and weakened for life. The general comprehension of the elementary truth, that medicine repairs but cannot renew, will, more probably than anything else, conduce to a truer conception of its aims and possibilities.

In the ordinary practice of medicine these changes can be seen, almost insensibly but surely, at work. They are manifest in the common facts of physic taking. Since the time of our fathers great changes have taken place, and are still in progress, all in the direction of the diminution of the volume and number of drugs administered. Doses are getting smaller, pills are dwindling in size, and powders are growing so beautifully less as to suggest at no distant period their final and blessed extinction without hopes of resurrection. Drops are substituted for tablespoonfuls, and effervescent salts for the black draught of still blacker memory. The whilom bolus, monstrous in size and nastiness, is an extinct type of physic, and what pills still survive in dwarfed form decorously cover their nakedness in coats of varied hue, or present themselves in the seductive guise of bona-fide sugar-plums. Numberless are the ways and forms in which now-a-days the horror of physic contrives to hide itself. —British Quarterly Review.

AN outsider has this to say of Irving's first appearance: "His chief success was in puzzling the New York critics, and this he did most effectually. —One way to economize and to produce excellent results in cooking is to use suet in place of butter or lard. For many purposes it is better than either of these. Three rods, sixteen inches apart, will make a fence four feet high, and will cost less than twelve cents a rod, not counting the freight.—N. Y. Examiner.

Winter Quarters for Swine.

Those who keep a stock of hogs through the winter should not try to do so in quarters that are not perfectly comfortable, for two reasons. First, because the health of the hog is endangered, and second, because it costs more to produce a pound of pork when the hog is not kept in a comfortable condition in cold weather.

When we look back to our boyhood days, and call to mind some of our visits to farmers who kept their hogs where the wind swept through at a speed of twelve miles an hour, we can hardly repress a shudder. But fortunately a great progress has been made in not only providing our animals with more comfortable quarters, but also ourselves. Still, the question of what is to be done for the winter protection of the animals presents itself to us every year, and we should make it our business to, from year to year, make such repairs and improvements as our judgment shall suggest. Whenever we find that there is a chance for a current of air to pass through upon the hogs, or other animals, it should be stopped, and there should also be provision made for keeping out the snow and rain.

One of the mistakes which is too often made in providing winter quarters for hogs is in permitting too much water to accumulate where the hogs stay most of the time. While hogs may not be injured in warm weather by wallowing in the water, there is danger in cold weather, even though in quarters where the water does not freeze. Hogs should have a good dry bed to resort to, even in warm weather, but in the winter it is more important, because of the danger of the hogs taking cold.

Another mistake is very often made by keeping hogs in a dark cellar, where the ammonia that comes from the manure often seriously interferes with the health of the hogs. Light and pure air are very important for the health of not only the human race, but also for all of the domestic animals.

When we are able to get the most profit from our domestic animals, we shall have learned to keep them in quarters where they can be both comfortable and healthy. It is only the rich man that can afford to keep cattle in quarters where they are uncomfortable and unhealthy.—Massachusetts Ploughman.

Parsley in Winter.

It is very easy to have a supply of parsley all winter. Take up the plants from the garden, cut off all but a few small leaves at the center of the tuft, and plant them in a box of good soil. Another method is, to take a keg—a nail keg will answer; bore numerous inch or inch-and-a-half holes in its sides. Place the parsley with the crown at the holes and the roots extending horizontally into the keg, gradually filling in with earth to hold them in place. Finish by planting some roots upright at the top. Either box or keg, if supported at the kitchen window and watered as needed, will give a supply of fresh leaves all winter. The residents of cities who have no gardens, can buy parsley for this purpose in the markets, as it is usually sold with the roots attached. Those who are fond of parsley as a seasoning, and do not care to be at the trouble of raising it as above, may dry it readily and find it about as good as when fresh. Spread the leaves thinly on a pan; when the stove oven is not very hot, place this in it, and leave the door open. The parsley will dry very quickly; as soon as it is crisp, rub it between the hands into a powder, which is to be kept in bottles, tightly closed.—American Agriculturist.

Judge Black's First Appointment.

Hon. Alexander Thompson presided as Judge of the Sixteenth Judicial District of Pennsylvania (composed of the counties of Franklin, Bedford and Somerset) from the 25th of June, 1827, to March, 1842. He was a just man and a good Judge, but toward the close of his public life he encountered some opposition. A prominent lawyer of Chambersburg was named as an opposing candidate for the office, and soon a warm contest arose, in which the leading lawyers and citizens in the district took part. David R. Porter was then in the Executive chair. There was scarcely a lawyer in the district who did not visit the Governor to discuss the merits of the candidates. Early in the year 1842 a gentleman from Somerset called to oppose or to support one of the candidates—I cannot remember whom—and in his conversation produced a letter and read from it a paragraph. The Governor asked to have the whole letter read, which was done. It discussed the points of difference between the two candidates. The Governor asked he allowed to read the letter for himself, which was done.

"Black," he said; "J. S. Black? Whose son is he?"

The visitor then mentioned the name of Mr. Black's father.

Governor—I remember him. I sat with him in the Internal Improvement Convention of 1825, and he certainly was a most intelligent gentleman. But what can you tell me about the son?

Visitor—Well, he is a young lawyer with some practice. He sits in his office, walks up and down town, sits on the dry-goods boxes on the corner, makes some political speeches, and quotes Shakespeare.

Governor—Shakespeare! Shakespeare on the top of the Allegheny Mountains. What can he know about Shakespeare?

Visitor—Well, I believe he can repeat any play Shakespeare ever wrote.

Governor—What else does he do?

Visitor—He preaches! What does he preach about?

Visitor—He preaches as all the rest of the preachers do, and I can tell you he can get up in the Court House on Sunday morning and preach and pray about as well as any of them.

Governor—Well, so much for the Gospel—what about the law? Does he do much in that way?

Visitor—Yes; and there are some people who think he is a very good young lawyer.

Governor—How does he figure in court?

Visitor—He is rather awkward and hesitates much. He often amuses us very much, but I don't think he will ever make much of a speaker.

The visitor left, and the Governor, after a long pause, said to his amanuensis: "I do not believe there was a man in Somerset County who could write such a letter as that. Here is a man who has read Shakespeare, and no doubt, the Bible, or he could not preach much, and he pours out his thoughts in such English as amazes me. He evidently knows what a Judge ought to be. I must inquire further about that young man." As visitors called, inquiries were occasionally made about Mr. Black, and the answers were all satisfactory as to his character, moral and professional. Of course, advocates of his appointment soon sprang up. On the 30th of March, 1842, to the astonishment of many of the friends of the other candidates, a commission as President Judge was issued to Mr. Black. It is said that Judge Black was astounded when he saw it, asked whether the Governor had taken leave of his senses, protested his unwillingness to accept the office, and generally helped to set the town of Somerset in an uproar. He did accept the office, however, and in a few months established his entire competency to perform his duties, and rose high in the estimation of men of all parties.—Judge Porter, in Philadelphia Press.

Ethics of a Crowd.

There is no room for extremists in a crowd. The dude will be ground between the upper and nether millstone. In fact, those about him are likely to take a secret pleasure in adding to his discomfort. The crowd has a keen eye for sham, which fares particularly ill when it takes the shape of personal pretension. There must be a feeling that you 'are one of us' to secure good favor. People do not congregate in vast numbers to admire others, but to have a good time themselves. They are generally willing to do the fair thing, but want no 'putting on airs.' It requires room to do that with any degree of comfort to the operator. He must be out of ear-shot of the remarks which convey to him the sense of the failure he is making. It is a singular fact that no amount of experience, inherited or personal, is sufficient to dissuade many people of the idea that they can create false impressions as to their own importance on the beholder. For every word of admiration a flashily dressed or visibly consequential person elicits, he gets a thousand contemptuous recognitions as an ass—a fact he remains perennially impervious to. The strivings and projects of the swell constantly miscarry, and he knows it not—except when he is jostled in a crowd. He goes through the world in a state of perpetual ignorance as to his transparency.

The crowd is a great leveler, and the member of it who does not do his own leveling, has it done for him in a manner which is not all pleasant. Large and happy aggregations of people, like civilization itself, are based upon the spirit of mutual concession. The savage who does not know how to yield in little things wants all outdoors to live and have his being in. And what is the arrogant, bumptious person, however civilized his exterior may be, who has no consideration for others, but a relic of barbarism? The kindly feeling which prompts the doing of a small favor, at some slight inconvenience to self, it is which makes the happy crowd possible. The lubrication of good will, sympathy and small helpfulness is the grand secret which makes the social machinery move well. Each man must allow a little margin to others, or there can be no general elasticity to prevent things from being broken upon each other. He must round off the sharp corners, or there will be constant punctures and raspings.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Pioneer History of America.

This splendid volume of 1032 pages crowded with elegant and striking full-page illustrations has just been issued by Jones Bros. & Co., Cincinnati. This extensive work has connected historical value as well as thrilling narrative interest. The author is a perspicuous and dramatic writer, and carries each recital forward to an absorbing climax. The hundred engravings, so truly well drawn and so full of thought, suggestion and feeling. The work is written in the best, most graphic, historical style, which, combined with the intensely interesting facts detailed, will fill the mind of the reader throughout. No other book on Pioneer Life approaches it in vividness of description, purity and vigor of style, accuracy of detail and fascination of the story. The excellent introduction by Dr. Kidpath, written in his proverbially accurate and fascinating manner, is a good contribution to the volume. The publishers, who are an old and reliable firm, want agents to take orders for the work.—Cincinnati Commercial-Gazette.

A HUMAN FIRE.

The Phenomenon of a Burning Mine Repeated in the Physical System.

A few years ago one of the most important coal mines in Pennsylvania caught fire. It started slowly but soon obtained such headway that it spread through the greater portion of the entire mine. To flood it with water would extinguish the fire, but well nigh ruin the mine; and still the flames continued to increase. At that juncture a young man stepped forward and suggested that the entrances and exits of the mine be covered and secured, thus shutting off the supply of air. His advice was followed and the flames were finally subdued.

To compare the condition of this mine with many phases of the human system, is most natural and appropriate. "Fire in the blood" is not a mere expression, it is a most serious fact. How it originates, it may be impossible to say; but that it burns and rages with an increasing fury, the one who is its victim only too painfully knows. The blood is the life. It is designed by nature to purify, strengthen and sustain the system. It is too often made the channel through which poison and death are transported. Poisonous acids coming through the veins and arteries inflame and cause a fire just as real as the one which existed in the mine. They burn and irritate, causing the brain to become weak and the nerves unstrung; they carry pains to the muscles and leave agonies in the joints; they bring destruction instead of strength; they devastate the very portions of the body that most require help, and they hasten the approach of death in its most horrible form. These things have been felt by innumerable people who have been the victims of rheumatic disorders, and the agonies they have endured confirm this description.

There is but one way by which this fire in the blood can be extinguished, and that is by shutting off the supply of those poisonous acids. The lactic, lithic and uric acids come in to the blood through the liver and kidneys, and they remain in solution in the blood producing inflammatory rheumatism, sciatica, lumbago, neuralgia, gout and all rheumatic fevers and affections. When they are deposited as gummy crystals in and near the joints, they cause articular rheumatism; when in the muscles, muscular rheumatism and lumbago; when in the tissues covering the nerves, sciatica; when in the face, head and nerves generally, neuralgia. In every case they are painful; in most instances, dangerous. Inflammatory rheumatism is like a fire in some joint and becomes chronic, or suddenly attacks the brain or heart, causing apoplexy or heart-disease. The fire in the blood must be extinguished—the supply must be shut off. This can only be done by guarding the blood—by the use of the "Safe RHEUMATIC CURE," which is a blood-purifier and liver and kidney cleanser, and no means have ever been found for accomplishing this which can equal Warner's Safe RHEUMATIC CURE. It acts directly upon the seat of the disorder; it extinguishes the fire by controlling the supply and removing the cause.

The well known standing of H. H. Warner & Co., of Rochester, N. Y., the remarkable success which Warner's Safe RHEUMATIC CURE has achieved, being endorsed by no less a personage than Dr. Robert A. Gunn, Dean of the United States Medical College, New York, and the fidelity with which they have carried out all their promises to the public should be a sufficient warrant that the above statements are true. They have, however, guaranteed to cure ninety-five per cent. of all rheumatic troubles, especially acute, knowing full well that the demonstrated power of the remedy justifies them in so doing. Nothing can be fairer than this, and those who suffer in the future from rheumatism with such an offer before them, do so on their own responsibility, and can blame no one if living pain and untimely death are the results.

For sale by all Druggists and Dealers generally.

Worm, Weary, and Wretched.

"As weak as a cat" is an expression frequently used by debilitated sufferers who are trying to tell how forlorn they feel. It is an incorrect expression, for a cat is one of the most agile and vigorous animals in existence. It would be more correct to say, "as weak as a limp old rag," for that gives the idea of utter inability to hold one's self up. The weary person who feels thus is generally worn, worried, woeful, and wretched.

Sometimes it is a case of overwork, and sometimes of imperfect nourishment. The blood in the system of a person who is "as weak as a rag" is in a wretchedly thin condition. It needs iron, to impart richness, redness, and strength. This is to be had by taking BROWN'S IRON BITTERS, the only safe and proper preparation of iron in connection with gentle and powerful tonics. The physician and the druggist can tell the worn and weary how valuable a remedy BROWN'S IRON BITTERS has been found in actual every-day use.

FOR PRESIDENT,
That uncrowned King of every Democratic heart,

SAMUEL J. TILDEN.

FOR VICE PRESIDENT,
Mr. Tilden's companion in Victory and in Humiliation,

THOMAS A. HENDRICKS.

ANNOUNCEMENT.

Richard Reid, of Mt. Sterling, is a candidate for Judge of the Court of Appeals, to succeed Judge Hargis—subject to the action of the Democracy of the First Appellate District.

CONGRESS assembles one week from next Monday.

THERE will be no military display at the inauguration of Gov.-elect Hoadley.

THE Supreme Court of Kentucky has decided that pension money is liable for seizure for debt.

AND now it is said that Tilden is fed with a spoon. Better keep Ben Butler away from him.

WASHINGTON looks forward to a gay winter, socially, and a season of intense political activity.

THE Deuber Watch Company at Newport are making about 5,000 cases a week. Their work is said to be the best in the United States.

THE Boston Post says that a good many Democrats feel over the Massachusetts election as a man does at his mother-in-law's funeral.

JUDGE Hoadley proposes to imitate the Spartan simplicity of Gov. Cleveland at his approaching inauguration. No military need apply.

SENATOR BECK, who is Washington thinks Carlisle will be elected speaker, and that Randall does not stand any probable chance at all.

THE railroad companies of Kentucky will make an effort to secure the repeal by the Legislature of the law creating a Railway Commission.

Boston very injudiciously permits a dispatch to go forth announcing that a Massachusetts man was killed by one little indigestible baked bean.

THE Pennsylvania Legislature is thinking about adjourning after a session of nearly a year. The Governor will order another thanksgiving day.

DISTILLERS and manufacturers of spirits are preparing petitions for presentation to Congress, urging an extension of the bonded period of whisky two years.

CARLISLE has enough votes secured to insure his election, and Randall has enough to secure his election. There is evidently something wrong in the footing up.

GROVER CLEVELAND, of New York, continues to weigh upward of 200 pounds physically, but politically speaking he is in position to hire out as a living skeleton on an hour's notice.

As Congress convenes on the 3rd of December—only three days after Thanksgiving—a majority of the members will forego the pleasure of wrestling with the annual turkey at home.

THE United States have 164 doctors to every 10,000 persons. In England the proportion is 6 to 10,000; France, 3; Germany, 3 and a fraction; Hungary and Italy, 6, and Switzerland, 7.

SOME of our most artistic actors are not upon the stage. A blind and armless beggar in New York was found at his home the other day reading a newspaper and carving a roast with both hands.

The Covington stock-yards received quite an invoice of cattle and hogs from this place last week.

If bicyclists have any objection to hear anything drop, they had better not ride on the streets Sunday.

That Frank Peculiar gang didn't show up here Sunday. It appears that Lexington is the point now.

Matt Johnson & Co. will give a fancy dress hop at Joe Will Miller's hall, on Thursday night the 29th.

After all the Mercantile Directory amounts to no more than Uncle Mart Layson's "little red book."

The Y. M. C. A. observed last week as one of prayer and already Hinkston has gone back within her banks.

A recent dispossessed partner (one of the silent kind) is going to bring suit to reclaim his primordial position.

Jno. Mock has removed his consumptive overcoat manufactory to the room adjoining the old billiard hall.

The doctors of this precinct, endorse Dr. Kellar's sentiments and will give him a vote of thanks as soon as possible.

The Knights of Wise Men are still gazing wistfully towards the South in hopes of catching a glance of that big, big, $1,000.

By saying that the contract with the editor was renewed, is all that is required to explain the continuance of this department.

Joe Batson says that the people about here who attend strictly to their own business, are lying very quietly in our cemetery.

Jno. W. Boulden has purchased Miss E. Jones' property at figures to suit all concerned. He will renovate the building and live in it.

The department confesses that the street lamps are never lighted, but it is unwilling to assert that Marshal Ballenger is a fraud to do the work.

Some families insist on making Main street a garbage alley. If the town had a nuisance inspector the treasury would be filled or the practice stopped.

Dr. G. T. Gould will deliver the Thanksgiving sermon in the Presbyterian church. If the weather continues the church will be crowded with people.

The Broadway Methodist church now glitters with a new coat of paint. The colored brethren display a deal of energy and should be encouraged by assistance.

There is a young clerk in this town who was never known to say five decent words consecutively. His mind is so debased and his heart so warped from purity, his tongue is a beaten path pressed by words of the foulest cast.

A little misdemeanor on the part of a Main street striping caused her fond man to lock her up in the closet and feed her on corn bread and water for a day and a half. Flap jacks and peach tree tea, would have been better.

If there can be found enough boys to insure its success, would it not be a good plan to give a tony little hop? It has been many a weary day since the noted Lexington Italians were down here to partake of gin slings and trale dollars.

The fair damsels are already in a flutter of excitement over the approaching leap year. They will organize a club next week and establish rules regulating all parties. The rules will be published. The boys have packed their kerchiefs and are looking about for some lone lile.

The villainy of a gray bearded farmer, who purchases finery for a colored panderer, has been borne with sometime. Although he is considered very cunning, the eagle eye of the Department has been upon him and will have his name in flaming print unless his brutishness is stopped.

The reason that the park fence is not finished, is because the posts are broken and the clips, to which the railings were attached, lost. The posts will have to be recast. If the council wishes to investigate something truly interesting it can examine the goodsbox gallery, or the "patent-applied-for-gate."

Sunday morning at one o'clock, in an empty freight car at the depot, several negroes could have been seen gambling. In the rear of the colored Christian church, all night Saturday night and up until 6 o'clock Sunday morning the same sight may have been witnessed. These are the scoundrels who live by stealing from their white neighbors.

MISS BERTHA CROWLEY, of Deposit, N. Y., dreamed three nights in succession of her uncle's death in Texas. Impressed with her dreams she addressed a letter to him. The letter fell into the hands of his lawyers, who have notified her that she has fallen heir to $50,000 by her uncle's death.

A MAN in London the other night shot the secretary of a race course in the leg and was at once given out that the shooter was an American. Now this is going too far. Americans may tamely submit to the responsibility of most of the crimes committed in London but they never shoot a man in the leg.

Bourbon's Candidate.

One of the most prominent candidates for Speaker of the next House of Representatives of the Kentucky Legislature is Hon. Chas. Offutt of Bourbon. He is about the best representative of the live young progressive Democracy in that body. Elected to the last Legislature when barely eligible, he made for himself such a record for independence, honesty, courage and fidelity to the best interests of the State as to secure a return without any Democratic opposition. He is one of the best lawyers of his age in Kentucky, and aside from that possesses every other essential element of a successful Speaker. Cool, level-headed, yet quick to see a point—dignified without being stiff in manner, and of commanding figure, the expectations of his friends would not be disappointed should he be chosen. Besides all this he has a great big heart beating in his manly bosom.—[Jessamine Journal.]

The above compliment is not overdrawn in a single assertion, and, from our best information, our candidate stands a first-class chance of being elected Speaker. Bourbon has never had a Speaker of the House, and it has been many years since she has had a State officer. Should the representatives honor our candidate with the Speakership, we are quite sure that none will have cause for a single regret.

A LARGE number of fraudulent land claims have been discovered in Dakota. It is estimated that not less than one half of the Government land in any one year is taken possession without the proper authority. An investigation is to be made.

Ohio and New York are looming up as the battle centers of next year's Presidential contest. The Republicans are reasonably sure of Ohio in a Presidential year, but they are not at all sure of New York, which is as naturally a Democratic State as Ohio is naturally a Republican State.

THE Courier-Journal says: The world is not scared at Architect Bell's assertion that the Capitol is unsafe. "A building that safely weathered the upheaving effect of Blaine's rhetoric and remained firm during the ungrammatical earthquakes of John Logan is liable to stand when Mr. Bell's relatives have forgotten to drop violets on his grave."
